

Player of the Year: Karley Ann Yoshioka, Pac-Five

You could call Baldwin baseball star Kawena Alo-Kaonohi a three-way player.

He was exceptional on the mound with a 6-0 record to go along with a microscopic 0.60 earned run average.

He was clutch at the plate, batting .314 with a team-leading 14 RBI.

But it was his leadership that coaches credit for the Bears winning their first Division I state baseball crown since 1995 and fifth overall in the Wailuku school's history.

For that, Alo-Kaonohi was selected ScoringLive's All-Hawaii Division I Baseball Player of the Year.

"He was our No. 1 guy," Baldwin coach Jon Viela said. "Every game he went (started), he won. Good leader. He hit the ball well. He played defense well. His leadership was unbelievable."

Alo-Kaonohi's leadership was noticeable across the opponent's dugout as well.

"He definitely did it with the bat and with his pitching, too," Maui Sabers coach Chase Corniel said. "He led his team both verbally and on the field, by example, and I know that he would do whatever it takes to will his team to win. Whatever they asked him to do, he did it. His attitude and his ability to will his team to win was the determining factor in the MIL championship and the state championship, so he's definitely a great leader."

Coach of the Year: Cecil Hasegawa, Pac-Five

Pac-Five coach Cecil Hasegawa is the Division II Coach of the Year after guiding the Wolfpack to their first state title since 2011. Hasegawa's squad had four wins over Division I competition during the season to finish with a 10-6-1 record.

"I've known him for quite a while. He's a good coach and very humble," said Gusman. "There's no better person than Cecil to win this award. I tip my hat to him."
